

The Principles of Responsive, Collaborative Leadership for the CCSU Educational Leadership Team are as follows:

- How we communicate is as important as what we communicate.
- The greatest growth in leadership for the individual occurs through systemic, organizational interaction with other leaders.
- There is a set of skills that leaders need to learn and practice in order to be responsive and collaborative decision makers.
- Knowing each other as leaders is as important as knowing our own leadership framework.
- Knowing each other's schools is as important as knowing our own schools.
- How the Educational Leadership Team works together to accomplish the CCSU Vision and Mission is more important than our individual differences.

Linda
Keating