Writing: Authors finished their Toddler Narrative Stories and the books went off to the publishers. We're crossing our fingers for a quick return, before the end of the school year! Can't wait to see the finished products.

Math: Journal 1 was sent home. If you would like for your child to keep their math skills fresh over the summer, this is a great resource to pull out. There are plenty of extra practice activities left over for maintenance. Journal 2 would also be a good resource.

Social Studies: We have been traveling through Vermont history, preparing ourselves for our end-of-the-year cumulative project. The Vermont Wax Museum teaches visitors important facts about how our state evolved over thousands of years into what it is today. Students will portray key figures or events which were studied in Social Studies class. They will be transformed into 'wax characters' and dressed to their assigned historical character. Please join us on June 11, during one of the following blocks of time-8:30, 9:00, or 9:30 for a self-guided tour.

Final Notes: Thank you so much for sharing your child with me this year. I have enjoyed getting to know each and every one of my students. This school year, which is quickly coming to an end, has been very productive, filled with wonderful learning experiences not only for your child but for me as well. One of the joys of my career is that I am always being taught new things by my students. This years class has been very eager to learn. I hope everyone has a restful and safe summer. Thank you for all you support throughout the 2009-2010 school year.

Points of Interest

- Student Led Conferencing was fabulous. It was really cool watching the kids take responsibility for their work and "glow" while sharing with families!! Great Job Everyone!!
- Please check in with your child to see if they know where their blue, plastic template for math class is located at this time. This is one of the few items which we collect and reuse over the years. Those that are lost have to be re-ordered from the budget.
